Laryssa's family consists of the mother, maternal grandmother, and uncles, living in limited socioeconomic conditions, totaling five people in the household. The family has strong emotional ties and maintains a close relationship with the project Uerê. The monthly income of the family group is estimated at 1 minimum wage, coming from informal work and social benefits. The per capita income is approximately R$ 1,700 (EUR 275/month). The apartment is rented, so there is not much funds left at the end of the month. The family is classified as being in a situation of socioeconomic vulnerability with partial stability, according to an analysis of the conditions presented.

Laryssa is a brilliant student and successfully completed the primary education. In 2026 she will enter the three years of secondary education. She is very focused and knows that she received a unique chance to one day escape the fragile living conditions. Thank you very very much Marlies for supporting this wonderful young girl all those years.

Things in the slum are as usual - poor, complicated and some days also very violent. Many days the schools and the local health posts were closed due to difficult conditions in the neighbourhood. Police actions are hard handed and the criminal gangs continue to fight for territory. The truce between the rival gangs is fragile. People do what they can to make a living, but prices for rent, food and beverages have gone up. The local public schools are understaffed and teachers are often demotivated and look for jobs outside of the slum. Who would blame them.

Some local NGO's do their best to offer entertainment for the kids, job opportunities for teenagers and help with food baskets for families with no income.

Projeto Uerê is a beacon of stability in the slum and every year, mothers hope that they can matriculate their children in the project. The waiting list is long. With all the tragedies in the world and partly also the ignorance of politicians it is difficult to find sufficient funding and it is an every year battle. But Yvonne and the staff go on and do whatever they can to make a difference. Thanks to all the sponsors who are loyal and committed.
